Trump's national security adviser added a journalist to text chat on highly sensitive Yemen strike plans.

A major security breach has rocked Washington as top Trump officials, including VP JD Vance and Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth, accidentally leaked classified Yemen strike plans in a Signal chat with journalist Jeffrey Goldberg. The revelation raises serious concerns over intelligence handling, with calls for investigations and potential resignations. Former President Trump dismissed the controversy, but the fallout could force military strategy shifts, strain U.S. alliances, and embolden adversaries.

India eyes tariff cut on $23 bln of US imports, to shield $66 bln in exports.

India is negotiating a major tariff reduction on U.S. imports, aiming to lower duties on over half of the $23 billion worth of goods to prevent the impact of President Trump's reciprocal tariff policy. This move signals India's attempt to maintain strong trade ties with the U.S. while protecting key domestic industries. The talks come as Trump continues to criticize India's tariffs, and failure to reach a deal could expose Indian exports—especially pharmaceuticals and automobiles—to higher U.S. tariffs, potentially benefiting competitors like Indonesia and Vietnam. If successful, the agreement could ease trade tensions, but political resistance in India and Trump's firm stance on tariffs could complicate negotiations.

Erdogan slams protests over jailing of Istanbul mayor as 'movement of violence'

The arrest of Istanbul Mayor Ekrem Imamoglu, a key rival to President Erdogan, has sparked widespread protests in Turkey. Charged with corruption, Imamoglu's detention has fueled accusations of political motivation, with Erdogan blaming the opposition for inciting violence. The protests have shaken investor confidence, causing a decline in the stock market and lira. As unrest continues, Turkey faces increased political instability, which could further strain its fragile economy and deepen divisions within the country.
