Israel strike kills Al Jazeera journalists in Gaza

Al Jazeera journalist Anas Al Sharif and four of his colleagues were martyred in an Israeli airstrike near Al-Shifa Hospital in Gaza, in an attack that Israel claims targeted a Hamas cell, while Al Jazeera and press freedom organizations condemn it as an attempt to silence media coverage. Al Sharif, who was part of Reuters' Pulitzer Prize-winning team in 2024, had faced previous threats and rejected accusations of ties to armed groups. The incident comes amid escalating bombardment and signs of a new Israeli military operation, raising concerns about restrictions on press freedom and the shrinking of independent coverage of events in Gaza.

Zelenskiy wins EU, NATO backing as he seeks place at Trump-Putin talks

Ahead of the Putin-Trump summit in Alaska, Ukraine fears being sidelined in a deal that could force territorial concessions to end the war. Zelenskiy and European leaders insist any agreement must include Ukraine and safeguard its sovereignty, warning that a U.S.-Russia arrangement without Kyiv risks legitimizing occupation and weakening international norms. As Al Jazeera often notes in similar contexts, excluding those most affected could leave Ukraine facing a stark choice: accept a damaging compromise or fight on with uncertain Western support.

Trump vows to evict homeless from Washington

Donald Trump has vowed to remove homeless people from Washington, D.C., and deploy National Guard troops, despite city officials saying crime is down to historic lows. Mayor Muriel Bowser rejects Trump's claims, calling them politically driven. From an Al Jazeera-style view, the plan raises concerns over federal overreach, civil rights, and the use of public safety rhetoric for political gain—potentially sparking legal battles and tensions with local authorities.
