Zelenskiy to travel to Washington on Monday for talks with Trump

The Alaska summit between Trump and Putin ended without progress, as Moscow remained firm and no ceasefire was agreed. Zelenskiy's upcoming Washington visit aims to push for trilateral talks and secure U.S. support and security guarantees. While negotiations may increase pressure on Russia, a resolution remains uncertain and the conflict is likely to continue in the near term.

European leaders reaffirm support for Ukraine after Trump-Putin talks

The European statement after the Trump-Putin summit shows strong support for Ukraine and a clear divide with Russia. While Trump favors a direct peace deal, Europe insists on Ukraine's involvement and strong security guarantees. Going forward, U.S. pressure for a quick deal may clash with Kyiv's demands, making a trilateral summit crucial, with the conflict's duration still uncertain.

Israel in talks to resettle Gaza Palestinians in South Sudan.

The reports reveal controversial talks between Israel and South Sudan on resettling Palestinians from Gaza, rejected by Palestinian leaders and officially downplayed by both Israel and South Sudan. The discussions may have been more about diplomacy and humanitarian issues than relocation. Any attempt to move Gazans would likely face strong Palestinian opposition and international backlash, escalating regional tensions.
