 Washington residents protest against Trump's troop deployment to the city

DC protest

The European Union has confirmed plans to phase out Russian oil by 2028, despite U.S. calls to accelerate the timeline. The move aims to cut Moscow's war revenues, but Hungary and Slovakia oppose it over costs. The EU is working with the U.S. on energy cooperation, though securing alternatives remains a challenge. If implemented, the plan could weaken Russia economically and boost EU energy independence, but may test bloc unity and require careful management of costs and supplies.

 Israeli military warns Gaza City residents to leave, bombs high-rise tower

Israel's assault on Gaza City, including evacuation orders and tower bombings, is displacing thousands and worsening the humanitarian crisis. Netanyahu's push to capture the city, despite military concerns, heightens civilian tolls and fuels global criticism. The campaign may complicate hostage talks and deepen Israel's isolation, while pressure for a ceasefire or negotiated settlement grows.

 Boko Haram kills dozens in 'house to house' attack in Nigeria's northeast.

The Boko Haram attack on Darul Jamal killed over 60, including soldiers, and destroyed homes in a village recently resettled after displacement. Residents' warnings were ignored, exposing security gaps. The assault threatens recovery efforts and may heighten fear, pressuring Nigerian authorities to strengthen protection and counterinsurgency measures.
