👉 After issuing 'last warning' to Hamas, Trump eyes Gaza deal 'soon'

U.S. President Donald Trump issued a stern ultimatum to Hamas—calling it his “last warning”—and claimed Israel had accepted his terms for a Gaza hostage-release deal. Speaking after returning to Washington, he said negotiations are ongoing and hinted a “very good” agreement could be reached soon. Hamas confirmed it has received U.S.-mediated proposals and is willing to negotiate, including a full hostage swap in exchange for ending the war.

👉 US probes malware email targeting trade talks with China, WSJ reports

U.S. authorities are investigating a fraudulent email, sent in July and falsely attributed to Representative John Moolenaar, which contained malware traced to APT41—a hacking group linked to Chinese intelligence. The email targeted U.S. trade groups, law firms, and agencies in hopes of gleaning insight into Trump administration trade talks with China. The FBI and U.S. Capitol Police are probing the incident; it remains unclear whether the malware successfully infiltrated any systems.

👉 Yen slides after Japan PM Ishiba resigns, dollar wobbles

The yen plunged—about 0.5–0.7% against the dollar—following the unexpected resignation of Japanese Prime Minister Shigeru Ishiba, amplifying market anxiety over Japan’s fiscal and monetary policy direction. Investors eye possible successors like Sanae Takaichi, who favors looser economic policies, fueling volatility in bonds and equities. Simultaneously, a weak U.S. jobs report reinforced investors’ expectations of a Federal Reserve rate cut this month, keeping the dollar unsteady.
