12 dead in crash after engine falls off cargo plane during takeoff in Kentucky

At least 66 people have been killed and hundreds of thousands displaced after Typhoon Kalmaegi, one of the strongest storms this year, struck the central Philippines. Most of the fatalities were in Cebu, where severe flooding submerged entire towns and swept away homes, cars, and shipping containers. A military helicopter assisting in relief efforts also crashed, killing six crew members. The typhoon, locally named Tino, brought winds exceeding 130 km/h before weakening as it moved toward the South China Sea. Officials declared a state of calamity in Cebu, describing the flooding as “unprecedented,” with rescuers struggling to reach stranded residents.

US to cut flights at 40 airports if shutdown doesn't end, transportation secretary warns

US Transportation Secretary Sean Duffy warned of a 10% reduction in air travel capacity at 40 major airports starting Friday if the government shutdown continues. The move follows reports of air traffic controllers suffering from fatigue after working unpaid for over a month. The cuts will begin gradually at 4% on Friday and reach 10% next week, potentially canceling around 4,000 flights daily. Duffy said the decision aims to maintain safety and efficiency. Airlines urged Congress to end the shutdown quickly, warning that prolonged disruption could severely impact operations across the country’s air travel network.
