Elections Require American Security Promise

Ukrainian President Zelenskyy said Tuesday he is ready to hold elections within 60-90 days if the U.S. and allies guarantee vote security. Facing pressure from President Trump to hold elections as part of peace negotiations, Zelenskyy requested American and European help to ensure election safety. His comments came after Trump suggested Ukraine uses the war as an excuse to avoid elections, questioning its democratic status. Zelenskyy dismissed claims he is clinging to power as "totally inadequate," noting wartime elections are currently forbidden by Ukrainian law.

UN Rights Office in 'Survival Mode' After Funding Cuts

The UN's human rights chief said the UN Human Rights Office (OHCHR) is in "survival mode" after major funding cuts from international donors. He warned that resources for the office and for human rights organisations worldwide, including grassroots groups, have been sharply reduced at a time when rights violations and humanitarian needs are rising in conflict-affected areas.

UN Human Rights Office in Survival Mode

Australia's defence minister said the AUKUS submarine program faces major challenges, including workforce skills, supply chains, and base readiness. A Pentagon review examined whether Australia and the U.S. are moving fast enough, ahead of AUKUS talks in Washington. Australia says it's still on track to host four U.S. Virginia-class submarines in Perth by late 2027.
