Canada removes Syria from its list of foreign state supporters of terrorism

Canada said it has removed Syria from its list of foreign state supporters of terrorism and delisted Hayat Tahrir al-Sham (HTS) from its terrorist entities list. Ottawa said the move aligns with recent steps by allies, including the UK and the United States, and cited actions by Syria's transitional government aimed at improving stability, building an inclusive and secure future, and cooperating with international partners on regional stability and counter-terrorism.

Historic Tensions Reignite: Thailand Strikes Cambodia

Thailand launched airstrikes into Cambodia on Monday, breaking a U.S.-brokered ceasefire. Thailand claims one soldier killed and eight wounded after Cambodia mobilized heavy weapons. Cambodia says Thai forces attacked first and insists it has not retaliated, though three civilians were injured. Former Cambodian leader Hun Sen labeled Thailand the "aggressor" and warned of a "red line" while urging restraint. The clash follows a July conflict that ended with a Trump-brokered ceasefire.

Chinese Jets Lock Radar on Japanese Planes

China's Liaoning carrier conducted 100 air operations near Japan's Okinawa Islands, prompting Tokyo to summon China's ambassador after claiming Chinese jets aimed attack radar at Japanese aircraft. China denied it, accusing Japan of endangering flight safety. The clash follows Japan's PM warning of potential response to Chinese action against Taiwan. Beijing retaliated by advising against travel to Japan and suspending seafood import talks. Tensions rise as both nations dispute actions in waters near Taiwan, 110 km from Japanese territory.
