US and Israel launch "pre-emptive" attack against Iran

Israel said it launched a pre-emptive strike on Iran on Feb. 28, saying Tehran posed an imminent threat tied to its nuclear and missile programs. Explosions were reported in Tehran as Israel declared a state of emergency, sounded sirens and shut schools, workplaces and airspace. Reuters reported the operation was coordinated with the United States, which was also conducting strikes. Iran warned of retaliation, including against U.S. bases, as diplomacy over its nuclear file faltered. Airlines rerouted as airspace closed.

Italy's defence minister stuck in Dubai with family

Italy's Defence Minister Guido Crosetto was stranded in Dubai with his family after flights were suspended following U.S. and Israeli strikes on Iran, a source close to the ministry said. Crosetto had flown from Rome on Friday evening on a civilian flight to join his family, who were already holidaying in Dubai, and was due to return to Italy on Saturday afternoon. Italy's national airline, ITA Airways, said it suspended all flights to and from Dubai until Sunday.

Oil and gas majors and traders suspend shipments via Hormuz as US attacks Iran, sources say

Oil majors, tanker owners, and trading houses temporarily halted crude, fuel, and LNG shipments through the Strait of Hormuz after U.S. and Israeli strikes on Iran, Reuters reported, citing trading sources. Iran said it had closed the waterway, a chokepoint for about 20% of global oil and major LNG flows, triggering vessel buildups near ports like Fujairah and prompting route changes. The U.S. Navy and some governments issued navigation warnings, while multiple LNG tankers slowed, stopped, or turned back as disruption risks rose.
