King Charles' US Visit Aims to Revive Ties

King Charles and Queen Camilla's state visit to the United States will focus on renewing UK-US relations amid political tensions and heightened security concerns after a shooting incident in Washington. The visit will proceed with minor security adjustments and include meetings with President Trump, events in Washington, New York and Virginia, and a speech by the King to Congress. UK officials say the trip aims to highlight shared history, military cooperation, investment, tourism, education and people-to-people ties.

Iran War Accelerates Global Shift to Clean Energy

The war in Iran and disruption in the Strait of Hormuz have pushed oil-dependent countries to seek alternative energy sources, boosting demand for Chinese solar panels, batteries and electric vehicles. Chinese clean-energy exports reached record highs in March, with emerging markets in Asia and Africa driving much of the growth. Analysts say fuel price shocks are strengthening the case for renewables, while China's dominance in solar, batteries and EVs gives it greater economic and geopolitical influence.

Iran's Foreign Minister Arrives in Russia

Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi arrived in Russia as part of a regional tour following visits to Pakistan and Oman. The trip comes amid diplomatic efforts to contain regional tensions. Araghchi said his visit to Moscow would allow Iran to review war developments and coordinate positions. He noted that talks in Pakistan made some progress but did not achieve their aims due to what he described as excessive US demands. In Oman, discussions focused on shared interests in the Strait of Hormuz and continued expert-level coordination.
