Selling children to survive:

Afghan fathers forced to make impossible
choices

Afghanistan's hunger crisis is worsening as unemployment, drought, and major aid cuts leave millions unable to meet basic needs. In Ghor province, fathers say they are considering or have already arranged to sell daughters to afford food or medical care. Hospitals are overwhelmed with malnourished children, medicine shortages, and rising infant deaths, while many families say they have received no support from the government or aid organizations.

Xi's double act:

Putin set to arrive in China days after Trump's departure

Russian President Vladimir Putin is set to visit China days after Donald Trump's summit with Xi Jinping, highlighting Beijing's attempt to position itself at the center of global diplomacy. The visit is expected to focus on China-Russia coordination on trade, energy, security, Ukraine, Iran, and their shared push for a multipolar world. The meeting also reflects Russia's growing dependence on China amid Western sanctions and the Ukraine war, while Beijing may look to deepen energy ties with Moscow as instability in the Middle East continues.

Iran says peace proposal includes reparations for war damage, US
troop withdrawal

Iran says its latest peace proposal to the US includes ending hostilities across the region, withdrawing US forces from areas near Iran, lifting sanctions, releasing frozen funds, ending the US marine blockade, and securing reparations for war damage. The proposal comes as a fragile ceasefire holds after US-Israeli strikes. Trump said he paused planned attacks after receiving the proposal and suggested there is a strong chance of reaching a deal limiting Iran's nuclear programme, though Tehran's terms appear similar to an earlier offer rejected by Washington.
